VOTE IN OREGON’S PRIMARY ELECTION
by Marleen Ikeda Wallingford, Portland JACL President

Oregonians affiliated with political parties can vote for the candidate representing their party in the primaries. Most statewide leadership offices and state and local congressional offices are partisan. The purpose of the primaries is to select candidates for each party for the general election. Only one Oregon statewide office, the Bureau of Labor and Industries are elected on a nonpartisan basis. Many of the city and county offices are nonpartisan which means all eligible voters can vote.

One of the interesting Oregon senate races is in District 24 which includes east Portland and Happy Valley. Rod Monroe, longtime Democratic legislator is facing two other Democratic challengers, Kayse Jama, an African immigrant who is the executive director of an immigrant rights organization, Unite Oregon. The other challenger is Shemia Fagan, an employment attorney and former state representative. It will be interesting to see the outcome of this primary since conventional political wisdom would suggest that in incumbent who is facing two challengers to the position will prevail. In this case, the incumbent is facing strong opposition from the two candidates. It will be interesting to see who makes it to the general election in November.

Since the labor commissioner position is nonpartisan, any candidate who gets more than 50 percent of the primary vote wins the job by default. Three candidates are vying for the position: Jack Howard a Union County Commissioner, Val Hoyle a former House majority leader, and Lou Ogden, the mayor of Tualatin who oversaw the development of Bridgeport Village. There are significant differences in the candidates’ views. The mission of the Bureau of Labor and Industries is to protect employment rights, advance employment opportunities, and protect access to housing and public accommodations so it is important that this individual will be willing to strongly support equal access for all.

Washington County will be electing a new county chair with the retirement of longtime chair, Andy Duyck. Three candidates for the spot include: Bob Terry, currently on the Board, Katherine Harrington, a Metro Counselor and Ryan Deckert who has served in the Oregon legislature.

With the retirement of Dan Saltzman from the Portland City Council, there are several candidates who are running for his position who might shift the policies of the council. Nick Fish is re-running for his position and faces three other candidates.

Members of the Portland JACL are usually good about voting in the general election. Participation is down during the primaries. I would encourage you to read the Voter’s Pamphlet. The League of Women Voters of Oregon puts out a nonpartisan guide to the candidates positions on a variety of issues. It is also helpful to find out what organizations or who is supporting certain candidates or issues. Be an informed voter and vote!
Cliff Notes for Parents of Future High School Graduates

By Sharon Takahashi, JAS President & Graduation Banquet Treasurer

Leaving the Epworth Church on April 7, I thought it would be a good thing to have a quick guide for parents of high school students to help them through the “money hunt” for college. I know some have been saving forever and their kids won’t have money concerns (lucky!). But, sticker shock hits the majority of parents when they find out about travel, books, Uber fees, weekend activities, homesickness outings, and more. It all takes a toll on the parents’ pocketbooks and every little bit helps.

The Japanese American community has had a banquet honoring all high school seniors and a scholarship program for almost 70 years. Our scholarship program involves no FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) and is administered locally.

Step one: 1. Do you have a junior in high school with Japanese American heritage? AND/OR 2. Do you belong to at least one of the 11 sponsoring organizations? *

(Portland JACL scholarships do not have an ethnic requirement.)

If you answered “no” to number 2, all 11 organizations accept membership up till the October 15, 2018 deadline. Fees and requirements differ so you may need to make a phone call or two.

Step two: Check out the application on the Portland JACL’s website (pdxjacl.org). The Portland JACL has kindly posted this scholarship application for the past few years, but the banquet is the product of the 11 supporting organizations working together. Scholarship donors are the Azumano Family, Gresham Troutdale JACL, the Minamoto Family, the Sam Naito Family, the Verne Naito Family, Nikkei Fujinkai, Oregon Nisei Veterans, Portland JACL, Shokookai and the Veleda Club. The Japanese Ancestral Society has been the lead organization which receives the applications, sends them on to the scholarship committee for review, and coordinates the interview process.

Step three: Have the student start filling out the application, preferably not the night before it is due. It takes time and attention to do the job well. Parents can nag about GPA, taking the SAT, and pursuing interests (sports, clubs, community, church, job, etc.) but now the ball is in your child’s court. You can keep track of their service and volunteer activities and help them present it in an organized fashion. The same lecture applies to the essays. Have them take time to write, proofread, edit and polish. The application requests a reference/recommendation. Advise your student to pick carefully and follow directions. The interview committee is looking for prognosis for success in college so it must come from a coach, teacher or principal. Give the chosen advisor or teacher ample time to do a good job. Having read a few rushed recommendations with no specifics, I could tell it was a last minute “ask.”

Step four: Mail the application on the date indicated. No exceptions are allowed. I hope I have helped one parent of a student in the class of 2019.

16th Annual Minidoka Pilgrimage
July 5-8, 2018

This year Kay Endo and I will be leading the Portland contingent of the Minidoka Pilgrimage. This is a Pilgrimage plus trip where we will visit the Four Rivers Museum in Ontario, Oregon, visit scenic and historic sites near Minidoka, and also include a trip to Jackpot, NV for those who are so inclined in addition to attending the educational and emotional Pilgrimage.

This tour is arranged to accommodate people of all ages and abilities. We will help you make all the arrangements including registration. For those who are 80 years old or older and were incarcerated in a camp there is a senior scholarship available to you that will cover the registration for the Pilgrimage and accommodations.

Please contact me, Connie, at cmasuoka@comcast.net or 503-318-5839 (cell).

If you would like more information or would like to travel on your own I can help or you can learn more at www.minidokapilgrimage.org

Why Portland needs to leave the JTTF
by Susan Leedham, Portland JACL Vice President

On April 17, 2018, Mike German, formerly of the FBI, and the panel pictured below spoke in support of the city of Portland’s withdrawal from the JTTF.

It was a sobering night of Mr. German laying out all of the problems with the JTTF, mainly stemming from a total lack of oversight and an ever decreasing standard for opening an investigation. You no longer need probable cause or a reasonable expectation of a future criminal event, which directly violates Oregon law requiring reasonable suspicion.

Mr. German said the JTTF is necessary to the FBI because with only 1300 agents nationwide, they rely heavily on local jurisdictions, with each jurisdiction providing two officers who are free to the FBI but which are paid for locally. And with Portland’s shortage of officers, we are paying for two officers who now work for the FBI.

The city of San Francisco recently withdrew from the JTTF, and the city of Oakland is expected to follow suit.

Zakir Kahn of CAIR related that no federal hate crime charges have been filed since Trump, and he talked about how his community is afraid and suffering from trauma and vicarious trauma, choosing to stay isolated in their own communities, which just compounds the problem.

Mr. German was also troubled by the JTTF’s reliance on manufactured plots, like Portland’s own would-be Christmas tree bomber, Mr. Mohomud, from a few years ago. He talked about how Mr. Mohomud didn’t even own a gun, and with the FBI spending so much time and resources on manufactured plots, they are not focusing on real plots.

We need transparency to prevent overreach, like Mr. Mayfield experienced when he was unjustly accused of being the Madrid train bomber, and the JTTF only works in secret.

As of now, only Amada Fritz is strongly in favor of withdrawing from the JTTF. Hopefully, after the upcoming City Council election, we will have the votes to withdraw.
