REST IN PEACE, ALICE
by Chip Larouche, Portland JACL Treasurer

On August 16th, everyone in the community were saddened to hear the news that Alice Sumida had died in her sleep at the age of 104 years old.

Alice was one of eight children born to Tameji and Take Eto. The couple had emigrated from Japan and settled in the rich agricultural region of California’s Central Coast. Alice attended Mills College in Oakland, California, with her sister, Toshiko, then met and married Mark Sumida. The newlyweds moved to Seattle to start a new life but not long after the attack of Pearl Harbor, an FBI agent showed up at their apartment to ask Mark unsettling questions. It wasn’t long before they received a letter with orders to be at Portland Assembly Center within two weeks, taking only what they could carry.

When a farmer came to the Assembly Center to recruit workers for his sugar beet farm, Alice and Mark leapt at the chance to get out. A few nights later, they boarded a train with 18 other men (Alice was the only woman from the center); and once again, the young couple was on their way to an unknown destination and future.

The work was difficult and the days were long and hot, but when the crew finished their assignment, the farmer told them they were free to go. He advised them to stay in the country, away from cities where anti-Japanese sentiment still percolated.

When an opportunity to purchase a 200-acre farm along the Snake River became available, Mark and Alice decided to take a chance. It took some effort, but eventually they secured a loan from a banker who believed they could make something of the rocky, barren land; then they landed a government loan to build twenty houses for employees and their families.

Several members of Alice’s family who’d been incarcerated at Manzanar in Northern California were granted release so they could help on the farm as well.

The challenges were many but with help from their family and seasoned employees, the farm thrived. Their first crops were potatoes and Spanish onions. But the market wasn’t great for these crops so Mark came up with a new strategy. They decided to grow gladiola bulbs. Within a couple years the Sumida’s fields were swollen with beautiful flowers with lots of customer orders.

After 20 years of farming the Sumidas sold the property and moved to the Portland area. There, they ran one of the first businesses to import koi fish to America until Mark died in 1981. Alice sold the business and their remaining property and moved to a condominium in downtown Portland. She got involved in many Nikkei organizations in the area and one day, a friend suggested they take a dance class. It had been years since she’d danced, but Alice became an internationally recognized ballroom dancer, winning numerous awards, starting at the young age of 88. At her last dance competition — held in Venice, Italy, as she was approaching her 100th birthday — Alice had to buy another suitcase to carry home her winnings. She had received five or six trophies and couldn’t carry them all home!

In 2004, she met author and artist Allen Say, who turned her story into the children’s book “Music for Alice,” recounting her life and passion for dance. In July 2011, she received the foreign minister’s commendation from the Japanese Consulate-General in a ceremony in Portland.

Alice Sumida was always friendly, upbeat and always kind to everyone, and her generosity to the Nikkei Community will remain legendary for a long time. We will all miss her very much.

Remembering Hiroshima & Nagasaki
by Marleen Wallingford, Portland JACL President

August 6th commemorates the anniversary of the first time nuclear weapons were dropped on human populations in Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Oregon Physician’s for Social Responsibility, a non-profit organization which works to protect human life from threats to health has partnered with local Nikkei and peace and justice organizations to remember those tragic events. Keynote speaker this year was Martin Hart-Landsberg, professor emeritus of economics at Lewis & Clark College. He spoke about the rocky relationship the United States and North Korea have had over the years. Just this past year, we have had the two leaders exchanging barbs which thankfully ended with a surprise meeting between Donald Trump and North Korean leader, Kim Jong-un. North Korea halted their nuclear weapons and missile tests, and the US canceled its war games. A four point agreement was reached but the momentum appears to be lost.

Moderator for the event was Jesse Gasper, president of the Oregon Marshallese Community and Oregon Bikini Association. Nuclear testing has been done on his island nation and places which we thought were isolated islands were not. The people can never go back to their homeland.

Invocation was given by Rev. Eisei Ikenaga of Nichiren Buddhist Temple. Unit Souzou added its powerful drumming to open and close the event. Pacific Islander youth performed, we heard remarks from artist, Yukiyo Kawano and poetry read by Patricia Hoover. The evening concluded with a parade led by Rev. Ikenaga to the nearby School of Oriental Medicine for Children Remember: Nuclear Stories Through Memories Relationship and Art. This was a moving presentation of Japanese youth interviewing the nuclear bomb survivors and interpreting their stories through art. We also heard through skype from the Hiroshima Peace Memorial, the memories of an atomic bomb survivor.

Although today was a day to remember the death and suffering of the people of Japan, today is also a day to look forward to building peaceful relations throughout the world. As Dr. Hart-Landsbury extolled us, “We need to become better educated about the history of US policy towards Korea….We need to continue our …efforts to force the US government to adopt a foreign policy that promotes peace,” not just the absence of war.

Did you miss this year’s Nikkei Community Picnic? We had Taiko, we had Judo, we had dancing, we had prizes, and we had FOOD! Don’t miss the picnic next year! Sunday August 18, 2019. Mark your calendar! Photos by Rich Iwasaki.
The banquet included a great meal, silent and not-so-silent auctions, an exciting dessert dash, and award presentations to Bob Shimabukuro and Kay Endo. Keynote Speaker was John Tateishi, National Redress Director for National JACL, who gave a very inspiring talk on many aspects of Redress that were behind the scenes yet crucial to its passage. As shown below, not all desserts had the same appeal as some of the others and the departing party favor announced a new upcoming capital campaign for O.N.E.

Weather blessings and exceptional golf
by Sharon Takahashi, Japanese Ancestral Society President

The field of 45 Japanese Ancestral Society golfers enjoyed cooler weather and inspiration as they participated in the 18th annual JAS Jerry Inouye Golf Tournament. The tournament is dedicated to Jerry Inouye, a past president who passed away in 2000. His commitment to fostering friendship and organizational collaboration on the golf course is still with us today.

The women’s flight first place winner was Jackie Alderman, with a score of net 68. She was followed by Andrea Nitta, net 69 and Emily Ogawa, the youngest golfer in the group (18 years old) with a net 69, also. In case of ties, the lower handicap finishes higher in the standings. Low gross honors went to Andrea Nitta who shot 89.

The men’s B flight was won by Jon Ollerenshaw, who shot a net 65. Coming in second and third respectively were Jess Toda, net 66 and Gordon Kondo, net 67. Low gross honors went to Jess Toda who carded a 90. The A flight was composed of 11 golfers. First place honor went to Jeff Yoshida, net 63, followed by second place Ed Tamiyasu, net 65 and third place Ken Saito, net 65. Again, the lower handicap finishes higher in the standings. Low gross honor went to Jeff Yoshida who shot a 74.

Grand champion for 2018 is Jeff Yoshida.

Committee chairs Sharon Takahashi and Nancy Kajitsu would like to thank the golf committee for all their hard work in pulling together a very successful tournament: Jackie Alderman, Kay Endo, Pat Gilman, Ron Hiromura, Kurtis Inouye, Nancy Kajitsu, Carl Kato, Terry Kawamoto, Gordon Kondo, Bob Kurimoto, Chip Larouche, Setsu Sadamoto Larouche, Don Matsuda, Merianne Nagae, Ken Ogawa, Jon Ollerenshaw, Sharon & Wayne Takahashi, Katie Tamiyasu, Frances Tanaka, Henry Ueno and Jeff Yoshida.
