25 Years Later
The Spirit of Mochitsuki Lives On

By Christopher Lee

As long as I can remember Mochitsuki has always been on the last Sunday in January. And like many things that have changed during the pandemic, we had to do things a little bit differently this year. Last August as the Mochitsuki Planning Committee gathered to start planning for the 25th Anniversary of our New Year’s festival, we made the bold decision to hold the event virtually. At the time, cases were still low, but in hindsight there is no doubt we made the right decision.

For me and perhaps for many of you, celebrating the New Year would not be the same without Mochitsuki. It is the one time of year we get such a large group of Japanese and Japanese American organizations together under the same roof.

So, how would we do that virtually?

Frankly, we did not even know where to start. Where else can you watch a taiko or dance performance, have some delicious Japanese food, buy hand-made crafts, and fit in calligraphy, ikebana, or tea ceremony in one day; let alone one place? Not to mention, seeing friends, family, and all the mochi!

It would be impossible to fit all of that into a one-hour zoom. So, we didn’t. The committee reached out to our contacts and asked them to help. In the true spirit of Mochitsuki, our community responded more emphatically than we could have ever imagined. Even those that didn’t know how to record a video were willing to give it a shot and persevered through the many challenges that technology presented.

At first, we only expected to have a couple of videos per week in January. However, in the end we worked with almost 50 different groups and had more content than there were days in the month. We released at least one new video every day to kick off 2021. It certainly was not the same event we have had in-person, but still a chance to share some of the Mochitsuki activities you love.

Thanks to funding from the JACL Legacy Fund Grants Program, our chapter was able to play a large role in the virtual event by taking the lead on the grand finale. I am admittedly quite biased, but if you only watch one video from Mochitsuki, make it this one.

The finale was a live-streamed program that included: a mini-documentary looking back at the 25-Year History of Mochitsuki, a very moving tribute to Valerie Otani, lively performances from Elena Moon Park, and a panel discussion led by Portland JACL board member, Sachi Kaneko. The panel also included violinist, Joe Kye; visual artist/activist, Ameya Okamoto; and performer, Elena Moon Park.

Although Mochitsuki was different this year, some things haven’t changed since the first event in 1996. We celebrated the New Year by coming together as a community and trying something a little bit different. A once in a lifetime effort for what I hope is a once in a lifetime pandemic. My sincere thank you and gratitude to the planning committee, all of our community partners, sponsors, vendors and every individual that helped us make Mochitsuki a reality in 2021. おつかれさまでした！

The great thing about virtual is that it isn’t too late to watch all the videos that our community has created. So far, we have had over 300 people watch the finale and over 3,000 video views total. That is about the same as our attendance last year, so we’ll count that as an accomplishment. Visit 2021.mochipdx.org to view the full Mochitsuki schedule. A recording of the live-steam finale is here:

2021.mochipdx.org/jan31

The best part is that you can do it at your leisure and while still in your pajamas or sweatpants. We plan to make all the videos accessible through the end of the year and are planning to be back in-person for 2022.

Please consider making a donation to Mochitsuki this year. Although costs were lower, we did not have any ticket sales and will be losing money to bring you this virtual event. You may donate online at:

Celebrating the 25th Annual Mochitsuki 2021 Japanese American New Year
Letter to the Editor
Sent to the Oregonian by our Co-President Amanda Shannahan

As a Japanese American, I am familiar with the concept of reparations. After my grandmother passed, I inherited the framed letter of apology acknowledging the injustices done to her and 120,000 others of Japanese ancestry during World War II. She also received $20,000 as a survivor of the Tule Lake concentration camp. While in no way did this money make up for the trauma and loss of dignity she experienced, it was still a meaningful step toward healing for her, our family and our community. Black Americans, however, still have not received any form of reparations for 250 years of slavery and continuing systemic racism. It is past due for meaningful action to address the generations of oppression experienced by Black people in the U.S.

Recently, the Japanese American community reaffirmed our support for House Resolution 40 (congress.gov/bill/116th-congress/house-bill/40), which would create a commission to study the effects of slavery and make recommendations to Congress for reparations. Our community is familiar with a similar body, the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, which was established in 1980 and facilitated Japanese Americans achieving redress and reparations. As a nation, we cannot truly begin to heal until we have reckoned with our past and provided compensation for people affected by injustices. The apology and financial compensation received by Japanese Americans like my grandmother was just a first step. Now is the time to support the call for reparations for Black Americans and for our country to continue down the path toward reconciliation.

The 1619 Project

Nikole Hannah-Jones is a Pulitzer Prize-winning reporter covering racial injustice for The New York Times Magazine and creator of the landmark 1619 Project.

The New York Times’s 1619 Project commemorates the 400th anniversary of the beginning of slavery in what would become the United States by examining slavery’s modern legacy and reframing the way we understand this history and the contributions of black Americans to the nation. Nikole’s lead essay, “Our Democracy’s founding ideals were false when they were written. Black Americans have fought to make them true,” was awarded the 2020 Pulitzer Prize.

Nikole also has written extensively about school resegregation across the country and chronicled the decades-long failure of the federal government to enforce the landmark 1968 Fair Housing Act.

In 2016, Nikole Hannah-Jones co-founded the Ida B. Wells Society for Investigative Reporting, a training and mentorship organization dedicated to increasing the ranks of investigative reporters of color. Please contact Marleen@pdxjacl.org if you are interested in getting the link for the event.
This year’s “dinner” will be an all virtual event. It will bring together leaders from social justice partners, members of the legal field, and supporters to explore the structural reforms needed to dismantle the deep-seated racism and inequity that permeates our institutions under the theme Justice is Indivisible.

Join our presenting sponsor, Nectar Markets, and others as we come together to celebrate the work we have done and the work ahead. We hope you will choose to stand with us at this critical time.

The keynote portion of this event can only be viewed live and will not be recorded for replay.

To access the keynote, you will need to RSVP in advance. Attendance to the virtual event is free, but an RSVP will be required to watch the keynote address.

Renaming Portland Public Schools

by June Schumann

As you’ve undoubtedly heard, some Portland Public School buildings are being renamed to more accurately reflect the diverse and inclusive ideals of today and to discontinue honoring those whose past behaviors are no longer acceptable. Wilson High School in SW Portland has become Ida B Wells-Barnett HS. Ms Wells-Barnett was a journalist & publisher in the late 1800s & early 1900s and helped found civil rights & women’s suffrage groups.

Madison High School in NE Portland (where Harue Ninomiya served as bookkeeper, Herb Osaki was a science teacher & coach and Betty Jean Harry was a teacher & counselor) will be renamed soon. One of the names under consideration is MIN YASUI HIGH SCHOOL! Many Sansei have been graduates of Madison High School.

As part of their due diligence, the renaming committee contacted the Minoru Yasui Legacy Project for information.

Below is a link to a survey seeking community input which includes the final list of potential names (and information about each) for Madison HS was requested by February 15.

Here is the link to the survey: bit.ly/3jkquKQ which includes other names under consideration.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact naming@pps.net
